100 Years of Momentum

The Kelley School of Business has been creating momentum for 100 years through foresight, innovation, and relationships we've built with our alumni, corporate partners, and global leaders. That momentum has taken us from our first enrollment of 25 in 1920 to our enrollment today of more than 22,000 students on our campuses in Bloomington and Indianapolis, and online worldwide. We take pride in the momentum when we were a first-mover in business education. We now lead in innovations such as the integrated core curriculum, team-based learning, and early stage career development programs that help students find their right path. We were also the first to 20 business school to offer an MBA online. That early entry into online education has made us one of the most credible schools in our ability to continue programs for corporations and academic partners around the world, and to develop niche programs quickly to meet market demands. As business has changed through the years, we have learned we can be innovative and create momentum while still honoring our principles, our traditions, and our mission. We will continue to develop meaningful programming for our students, alumni, and ourselves as we look toward our next 100 years.
